

5 Communication Images Where Color Contains Major Role

5 Best Ways to improve Your English Speaking

www.jobdrives.com

5 THINGS YOU SHOULD NEVER SAY IN AN INTERVIEW

"I DON'T HAVE ANY QUESTIONS"

Rule #1 of the interview, always do your research about the company and be prepared with at least 3-4 relevant questions to ask. Not having any questions for the interview says that you aren't interested enough to learn more. So, you can ask the interviewer questions like his/her experience of working with the organization, any challenges faced by them and so on.

"I REALLY CAN'T IMAGINE ANYONE MORE QUALIFIED THAN ME".

Being boastful of your self during an interview is a very bad idea. When managers ask to give them the reasons for hiring you, what they really want to know is why you think you are a right fit for the job. So, focus on your skills and qualifications along with any hands-on experience that you have in problem-solving.

"WHAT KIND OF WORK DO YOU DO HERE?"

Even though it seems like a good enough statement to begin your conversation with the manager, it shows that you haven't done your research in advance. Instead, you should do your research about the hiring managers' role before the interview and ask questions related to specific projects or the team.

"I HAVE MENTIONED THIS ON MY RESUME"

Here's the thing; hiring managers know most of the stuff you have on your CV. Most of the time they want you to go above and beyond your resume and give them real-life examples. They are most probably evaluating your communication and social skills. So, instead of referencing your resume, use this opportunity to showcase your skills.

"WHEN CAN I START"

While it is good to show some excitement about working with the organization during the interview, asking about the date of joining during initial rounds is completely unacceptable. Instead, you can ask the manager about the next steps in the process of hiring. So, don't be pushy and in the end, thank them for their time.

image courtesy of magnetize.com.au

"UNTIL WE MEET AGAIN" CELEBRATION FOR WILLIAM CHESNEY

On the occasion of Bill's retirement there will be a gathering as well as a week-long exhibition of Bill's art work, both professional and personal. Everyone is welcome.

*Tuesday, December 3
2-5 PM*

*Theatre of the Arts,
Modern Languages
Building*

Speeches at 4 PM

